TRAVELLER FAMILIES SERVED NOTICES IN CRACKDOWN

TRAVELLERS have been served notices to leave Dale Farm by August 31.

Basildon Council arrived on the site yesterday to tell many of the 90 families living on the 51 illegal pitches they will be evicted unless they leave peacefully.

Michelle Sheridan, 33, from the site, pictured, said: "The atmosphere down here is terrible. All the old ladies are crying. There are a lot of sick people here and they are all so worried now."

It comes as the Echo can exclusively reveal six families living on three caravan pitches could be immune from eviction because of a legal loophole.

£4k raised on bike ride

A RETIRED teacher raised £4,000 for charity by cycling across Europe.

Nick Ullmann, 60, from Basildon, pedalled 1,300 miles from London to Vienna, Austria, to mark his retirement from teaching at Billericay School.

The money raised will go to the Red Cross, which helped to reunite his father and grandmother after the Second World War.

Almost half of the money was raised by Billericay School pupils, through fundraising events they organised to support their teacher.

TRAVELLERS who have moved on to Fossetts Farm are set to get a notice to leave.

They camped up on private land on Sunday afternoon, after a fence was knocked down.

But the landowner is seeking an order to make them leave her property and expects them to be gone within two days.

Peter Ashley, councillor for St Luke's, said: "I have been up there. Police are aware and the landlady is aware.

"She has been to see them to ask them to move. They said they will move within two days.

"She's getting a notice to get them to move, so we are dealing with it."

A spokesman for Southend Council said it could not do anything because it is private land.

However, he added: "The emergency planning officer is aware of their presence and we're monitoring it."

Travellers' eviction countdown begins

THE countdown to the eviction of hundreds of travellers from Dale Farm has begun.

Many of the 90 families living on 51 illegal caravan pitches at the Crays Hill site were served with notices yesterday giving them until August 31 to leave or face eviction.

Essex Police accompanied staff hired by Basildon Council to serve the orders.

Michelle Sheridan, 33, lives on one of the plots in a road called Beauty Drive and said the atmosphere at the site was terrible.

She said: "We heard they were coming, but we have been expecting it for so long. Then they came and put the notices on all the plots. All the old ladies are crying.

"There is a lot of sick people here and they are all so worried now."

of the site known as Camilla Drive.

Council leader Tony Ball said the eviction could still progress because most people had been notified and the authority had made an attempt to serve notice on all the plots.

The notices came just days after the council agreed to pay up to £1.2million towards the eviction costs of Essex Police to complete the funding for the £18million operation. The eviction can take place any time from September 1, but it is not yet known if a date has been set.

Mr Ball spoke of his disappointment eviction appeared to be the only outcome to the ten-year planning dispute.

He said: "It is very disappointing we are in this situation, as for years we have attempted to work with the people living on this unauthorised site to seek a peaceful resolution. It is important to remember this is a green belt site and this development is not legal. The law must be upheld equally and fairly in all cases and the council has made clear, for more than ten years, its intention to clear this site and return it to a condition in keeping with its green belt status."

Traveller Maryanne McCarthy said: "We get treated worse than animals. They are allowed to live in the green belt, but not us. It is terrible now the notices have been served and we are all so upset."

If families remain on site after August 31 bailiffs will be able to go in and remove caravans and outbuildings plus remove hardcore bases on the plots. The council is offering to help people relocate and is encouraging all families to make homelessness applications.

Protesters plan to set up demo camp nearby

PROTESTERS against the eviction will set up a demo camp near the site from August 27.

"Camp Constant" will be set up on land owned by travellers in Oak Lane Crays Hill.

Activity days to prepare hundreds of supporters for non-violent

Natalie Fox, of support group Dale Farm Solidarity, said: "An entire community will be made homeless and we'll see children pulled from their schools and dumped out on the roads."
